

Welcome to the Park

Call Lake Provincial Park is a small, 62 ha park located 5 km southeast of Smithers and is significant due to its close proximity to the town. The park lies within the asserted traditional territory of the Wet'suwet'en people. It has a high ecological diversity due to its rolling topography, including forested and non-forested wetlands, coniferous and deciduous forests, and the red-listed Saskatoon-slender wheatgrass scrub-steppe grassland community. The landscape is dominated by spectacular views of Hudson Bay Mountain and the area is a great source of year-round activity.

Things to Do

- There are two main trails in Call Lake Provincial Park:
- The first is accessed from the end of Van Gaalen Road. This 700m long trail follows a ridge with some nice views of the Bulkley Valley before the trail descends to the southwest end of Call Lake.
  - The second trail is accessed from the end of Mountain View Road and is a great hiking and biking trail. It is a stacked 3km and 5km loop trail which extends beyond the park boundary. The upper part of the trail follows a ridge and provides great views of the Bulkley Valley and Hudson Bay Mountain, while the lower part of the trail parallels the shore of Call Lake. It is approximately 700m from the parking lot to the lake via the lower trail.

Hiking, mountain biking, and horseback riding are allowed on these trails in summer months. Cross-country skiing and snowshoeing are popular during winter months.

Canoeing on Call Lake can be accessed via a portage on either the Van Gaalen or Mountain View trails.

Call Lake is stocked with Brook Trout. Fishing is permitted year-round with an appropriate licence.
